Oysters with Restaurant Culture Oysters with Restaurant Culture (often abbreviated OYR) was an American rock band. Biography Oysters with Restaurant Culture was created in 1985 when a group of curious youths were standing at a sidewalk table in New York City, eating raw oysters. They soon found that people would pay them for some of those same oysters, and that it was a lot of fun. The band's debut, the album French 75, was released on Taang Records. The title track, a promotional single, was featured on an HBO series about The Doors. A live album, Live at Potsdam Ballroom, was released in July, 1986, and was one of the first releases of a band by Taang Records. The same year, the band opened for the Grateful Dead at Nassau Coliseum. The band's next release, The Human Race (1987), was produced by Ed Stasium, who has worked with Iggy Pop and the Stooges, and Andy Syan, who has worked with Otis Redding. The Human Race sold more than a million copies in the United States. The band also used The Human Race as the title track of the video documentary of the same name, which features interviews with the band and its members. In 1987, the band also recorded an album, Blind, with Black Sabbath singer Ozzy Osbourne, produced by famed Zappa producer, Bob Ezrin. The album was a faithful Zappa tribute and included the B-side, "Two Skies" (produced by Steve Albini), on the first pressing. The album was released on
